As the Land Use & Transportation Policy Manager for the Virginia Conservation Network, a coalition of 150+ environmental groups across the Commonwealth, I bring a wealth of experience and expertise in the fields of housing, mobility, and the climate. As a lifelong Richmonder, I also understand our city's troubled history and unique culture. I have spent over a decade living car-free, a choice that has endowed me with a deep understanding for the 21% of Richmonders who traverse our town without a private car. My goal in applying to this body is that I can bring professional expertise, lived experience, and empathy to the government processes that all too often leave regular residents feeling excluded and ignored. As a queer person, I hope I can broaden the representation our citizens see among their leaders and contribute towards a more inclusive Richmond for each and every person who calls this place home.
