

Tech Equipment

New Cingular Wireless, also named AT&T Mobility, will pay the city $30,000 a year on a five-year lease that can be renewed for 10 percent more, according to city staff notes.

“The concept is exactly the same as what we have at the other site in the park,” Brentwood City Manager Kirk Bednar said. “They would remove [the existing pole], install a pole with a larger diameter that’s able to contain all of their cell tower antennas and then they would reinstall the lights, and the pole would be the exact same height as it is today.”