I have always been interested in influencing change for the better in any town or city I have lived within, be that Oklahoma City, Portland (OR), and now in Richmond. In Oklahoma City I was volunteered with non-profit groups which advocated for new cycling routes in the downtown core and influenced new sidewalks being built. In Portland, I worked with recreation access groups to get more people involved with healthy activity and utilizing all of the built and natural resources that were available.*

Please List Your Educational Background and/or Other Expertise or Qualifications You Will Bring to This Authority, Board, Commission or Task Force:

I am a land use and transportation planner certified by the American Institute of Certified Planners (AICP). As did most urban planners in the region, I began my life in Richmond as a Master of Urban and Regional Planning Student at the L. Douglas Wilder School of Government and Public Affairs. I did not have a specific focus in grad school- I expanded my undergraduate degree in historic preservation and explored transportation, land use, and economic development. Among many student projects completed with the city as a client, my professional plan was the Gillies Creek Greenway Plan. During graduate school I became a transportation intern with the RRTPO. There I supported the transportation staff in completing tasks related to the transportation improvement program (TIP).

I started my career as the project manager for the Pulse Corridor Plan at the Richmond Regional Planning Commission. This plan innovatively combined land use and transportation. I am extremely proud of my work during this time and am delighted that I was able to play a role in bettering our city. During this time I gained a strong working knowledge of Richmond's zoning ordinances and land use plans.

After the contract ended, I made every attempt to remain in Richmond. I became a freelance analyst and completed a four-month study for VCU's Office of President Emeritus, examining Richmond's development

I attended William Fox, Fisher Elementary, Thompson Middle, Richmond Community High and then graduated from Howard University in 2011 with a degree in health science. I've lived in Los Angeles, Washington DC, and rural Mississippi but have always returned to Richmond because it is my home and nothing matters more to me than seeing my home turning into a healthy space for families to grow and youth to be empowered to go out and explore life in an intentional manner. I've worked in the public schools system, rec and parks, boys and girls clubs, and even conducted community outreach efforts and advocated for the city's most vulnerable citizens on behalf of my church St. Elizabeth Catholic Church, and the boards I have been actively apart of (Richmond Hill, Richmonders Involved in Strengthening our Communities, and Unbound RVA).

I love Richmond, and I do not see myself living and investing in any other city in the world EXCEPT Richmond. Growing up in Jackson Ward, and Bon Air, I was introduced to two different spectrums of living within our city limits. I remember as a high school student working on a humanities project where we redesigned our neighborhoods, adding green space, bike racks, youth and family centers, sidewalks and art installments. It brought so much joy to me and instilled hope that one day these things could be a reality. I've been to numerous community meetings, sat in city council meetings, advocated on behalf of the city's homeless population and even started a food pantry for my neighbors in Jackson Ward. It would be a true honor to be a part of our city's planning commission and I am fully invested in seeing our city turn into a city of dreams manifested.

I am a registered Professional Environmental Engineer, focused on delivering both public and environmental health through design of large municipal infrastructure projects. I have a BSE in Environmental Engineering from Duke University and an MEng in Environmental Engineering from the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. My professional career has been focused entirely on municipal water, wastewater, air quality, and flood protection projects (primarily in New York and New Jersey, where I lived before moving to Richmond last year). My work is focused on how to maintain the health of both the environment and the public through thoughtful and responsible infrastructure design and construction. This expertise would lend me great insight into the Green City Commission's charter, as it is a constant balance between sustainability, environmental protection, and cost effectiveness.

Richmond City Health District is a quasi-city agency. It is operated by Virginia Department of Health, a state agency, but receives some support from city of Richmond agencies.

I am interested in serving on the Green City Commission as a private citizen.

Please List Your Educational Background and/or Other Expertise or Qualifications You Will Bring to This Authority, Board, Commission or Task Force:

Through my experience and technical training in public health, I have an understanding on how becoming a Green City can have health benefits and mitigate health disparities. For example, Richmond's East End is overburdened by childhood asthma; reducing pollution can have positive effects for the children. Additionally, many initiatives to encourage alternative forms of transportation not only benefit the environment, but also the morbidity of chronic disease within Richmond.

Additionally, my volunteer work, employment, and leisure time has exposed me to many of Richmond's diverse communities. I have served residents directly in the Northside and East End, am familiar with socioeconomic data across the city, and have worked with an array of community based organizations (including urban agricultural non-profits and environmentally-focused organizations). Most notably, I facilitate Northside Strong, a community coalition of people who live and work in Northside that comes together to network and work on collective projects. Our latest project focused on improving the walkability of Northside. This included partnering with residents to do outreach, conduct walking audits of communities, and clean up trash in partnership with Clean Sweep. The project culminated in a report that we shared with DPW and City Council members to advocate for various improvements that will increase t
