The City of Richmond Affordable Housing Trust Fund

2015-16 Impact Report

The Richmond Affordable Housing Trust Fund (AHTF) completed its second cycle of funding in 2016. This report summarizes the accomplishments of the fund over its first two years of operation. The third round of applications was submitted in early 2017 and will be awarded by May of this year.

The AHTF has two broad categories for funding. The first is development projects that produce new or rehabilitated affordable housing units – rental and ownership. These projects are eligible for gap financing in the form of loans. These loans are typically no or low-interest with repayment deferred until sale or refinance. Because the AHTF is true “gap” funding – the soft debt that makes the project feasible – loan repayments are anticipated to be slow and will not be a substantial source to add to current year appropriations.

The second category of proposals is for service projects. These funds are provided in the form of grants to support programs and projects that provide housing assistance. Examples include homebuyer education / counseling, support services to individuals with disabilities, and homeless intervention and prevention.

Overall, the AHTF funds are divided with about 73% to development projects and 27% to services. The chart below shows the history of Richmond’s appropriations to the AHTF.

Thus far, almost $2.2 million has been awarded to 17 projects that serve a wide range of needs, incomes, and household types. The AHTF has been extremely successful in leveraging other dollars – with more than $70 million coming from other public and private sources to support these housing projects and programs. The development projects will have a $50 million impact on Richmond’s economy and will generate fees and taxes to the City that exceed the amount appropriated.

Who Does the AHTF Help?

AHTF funds are deeply targeted, with over half of the households benefiting from the AHTF making 30% of Area Median Income (AMI) or below. This is $24,300 for a family of four and $15,200 for an individual. More than half of the households benefiting from the AHTF are homeless.

What is the AHTF's Economic Impact?

Each affordable housing development brings positive economic impacts to the City in the form of jobs, permit and hookup fees, annual real estate taxes, and overall economic growth. Once completed, all of the development projects funded with the AHTF will generate economic benefits for the City on an annual basis.

The analysis to the right focuses on the development projects and does not include the service projects, which have softer economic impacts, such as securing jobs for formerly homeless individuals, deconcentrating poverty with housing mobility programs, and economic activity generated through home repair and accessibility improvements.

773 jobs created during construction

43 jobs supported each year in operation

$1,112,865 collected in hookup fees, permits, etc.

$868,554 paid every year to the City in taxes

$49,642,548 in economic growth during construction

$5,198,971 in economic growth each year in operation

The AHTF is often the final piece of the puzzle in assembling the financing for an affordable housing project. The AHTF is also usually a small piece of the total funding package that comes from a variety of public and private sources.

On average, across the nation AHTFs attract $7 for every $1 invested. In the first two years of operation, Richmond's leverage ratio is 31 to 1.

$2,195,762 in AHTF awards = $78,338,421 in leveraging from other sources
